LETTER FROM THE PRINCIPAL ◀

Blessings friends,

Spring has arrived and is inspiring a feeling of excitement and energy throughout our campus. Although it's still a bit chilly, I hope you have an opportunity to get outside and enjoy the sunshine.

Last Thursday, we celebrated Women Making a Difference Day. The day included a Career Fair, breakout sessions featuring many different career topics and an inspiring presentation by NDA alumna Lt. Col. Amy McGrath Henderson '93. I hope you had an opportunity to talk to your daughter about this special day and all of the career opportunities presented.

Yesterday we had a guest speaker, Sarah Panzou, who shared the painful and amazing story of her personal journey after being involved in a tragic drunk driving accident. She used her story to encourage our students to make good choices, respect the advice of their parents and be less judgmental of others. I hope your daughter shared some of her thoughts on the presentation with you. It was obvious that many were quite moved by Sarah's honesty, humility and sense of humor.

This is Body Peace Week at NDA. There are many activities this week to help promote a positive sense of self with our students. You can read more about these activities below in the Student Services section.

Students will dismiss at 11:30 a.m. this Friday. Our annual Junior/Senior prom will be held Friday evening at the Hilton Netherland Hotel followed by our After Prom here at NDA. Please note: anyone attending Prom must be in attendance for the day's duration on Friday. Also please remember that students must be dressed appropriately to be admitted to the prom. Students must abide by the NDA Student Code of Conduct which is also highlighted in the prom agreement form they each signed. I am truly grateful to the students, faculty and parents who have put so much time and energy into planning these events to ensure a fun, safe and entertaining evening for our students and their guests!

We strive to educate our students at NDA through 21st century collaborative learning. This is a critical element of their education and an important skill for them to take with them when they move on from NDA. Mrs. Mullee has shared a perfect example of NDA's 21st century collaborative learning below. I am very proud of our community and the ways in which they embrace not only collaborative learning but also 21st century technology.

Don't forget to purchase your tickets for Jane Eyre, A Musical Drama. The performances will be held March 31 - April 2. You can find more information about the show and how to purchase tickets below.

Notre Dame Academy students are fortunate to have the opportunity to apply for a variety of annual scholarships. If you are interested in applying for one of these scholarships for the 2017-18 school year, please check our website for application information HERE. The application deadline is April 15.

Our Panda Preview Night will be held Tuesday, March 28 at 6:30 p.m. If you know of anyone interested in NDA and the opportunity to join our school community, please share this information with them.

Finally, it is my pleasure to announce the latest addition to our Panda family - Arden Caroline Webster. Arden is the daughter of Athletic Director Myanna Webster and her husband Matt. We congratulate the Webster family and welcome Arden!

In Notre Dame,

Mr. Jack VonHandorf

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNOLOGY UPDATE ◀

An Everyday Example of Real Life Collaboration by Molly Mullee

Students, teachers, sisters, and coaches are regulars in Room102 when they need assistance with a project. Today was no different; a group of 5 timid freshman cautiously entered Room 102 and asked how they could add a voiceover to their iMovie project. At least 4 seniors were in the room and they instantly began to give alternative options for this project. Some of the offered options were: Google slides, Prezi, Animoto, Canva, Thinglink, and more. The younger students, Anna Tranter, Grace Winstel, Evelyn Wagner, Lucy Teller, and Gabrielle Weber, were excited by these options and listened thoughtfully. By the end of the decision making process, they chose to "Airdrop" the photos they were going to use in their video from Lucy's iPad to the Production Lab computer setup. This would allow them to use Final Cut Pro for their video making software. Next they wanted a specific song for their project. I happened to have the song 102's audio library. I "instashared" the song from my computer to the Production Lab computer so they could collect all of their media on one computer. Once it was all collected, they wanted to voiceover their photos while the song played in the background. Senior, Harper Lamb, assisted them while they used Final Cut Pro for the first time and they completed their project for Ms. Hillary Johnson's World Geography course. When the bell rang, they weren't quite ready to submit the project to Canvas. They decided on a plan quickly that would allow three of them to return right after school while the other two had sports. All of them were collaborating equally so this didn't bother any of them.

Sure enough, Lucy, Grace, and Gabby walked in to 102 together after school to complete the project. They mentioned that they had made a Google Slides presentation and wanted to insert the newly made video onto the final slide. I showed them how to export the project, and then upload it to Grace's Google Drive. Then we wondered how could we get the video to open once in the Google Drive App. We noticed that Grace was already playing the video from her iPad, but the rest of us could not open the newly shared file. Grace told us she had to save it to her "camera roll" on her iPad and play the video from the "camera roll".

Last, we brainstormed and figured out how to get the video inserted into the last slide and how to upload it to Canvas. We finished the last step from the production lab computer and then submitted it to Ms. Johnson's assignment upload link.

During the course of the day, by walking into Room 102, these five students took a bold move and made a fabulous group project collaboratively with seniors. This is an excellent example of 21st century collaborative learning.

Body Peace Week

This week is Body Peace Week here at NDA. We have various activities going on to help promote a positive sense of self such as our positive post-it wall, an opportunity to experience a self-compassion meditation before school and discussion starters at the lunch tables, to name a few. Please take some time to speak with your daughter about these things as your opinion matters (even though they might act like it doesn't). Talking about our bodies and how they look can be difficult so here are some suggestions from a PBS.com article:

Talk about who your daughter is instead of how she looks.

Steiner-Adair (Catherine Steiner-Adair works with girls and parents in her private practice and speaks about body image and eating disorders in workshops around the country) recommends that we compliment girls on qualities other than looks. "Parents so often say 'You look so pretty today,' but don't say things like, 'You were such a good friend today,' or 'You handled that frustration well.' It's very useful to compliment girls on their assertiveness and even their anger with statements like, 'You were brave to tell me how mad you were,' 'I like how you stand up for yourself,' 'You and I disagree and I respect your thinking,' or 'I never would have thought of that; you are so smart about these things.'"

Talk about what women look like in the media.

Girls' images of themselves are shaped by what they see around them, by brand names in magazines, and in particular, by TV shows that focus more on what women wear and how their bodies look than on what they can do. Steiner-Adair recommends parents limit, but not ban, girls' exposure to television and particularly commercials. Talk with girls about what they see to balance the effects of these images. It's never too early to begin this conversation. "By the age of two, kids are aware of brand names, so think of what the images selling those brands may be doing to them."

Volunteers are also welcome to stick around after their two-hour shift for lunch with “the crew”. Grandparents in particular seem to love this job, so please consider asking your daughter’s grandparents if they would like to help out.
